Inquest in the Nienaber Suicide. Coroner Coleman held the inquest into cirumstances connected with the suicide of Jan Nienabor, detailed yesterday, last evening and rendered as his verdict that deceased came to his death from a pistol shot wound in the head by his own hand, the shot being fired with suicidal intent. The funeral took place this afternoon at three o'clock from No. 67 North Factory street, residence of the sister of deceased, Mrs. Thomas Nash. The testimony in part shows Nienaber to have been sinned against as well as sinning. Parties who knew him well and for whom he had worked gave him a good name, testifying he was industrious and hard working, when he had work, and rather of a pleasant, merry disposition. never drank anything intoxicating but was things were made so hot for him at the Beckinbaugh house that he could not stay there and old Mrs. Beckinbaugh would not allow his wife to go away and live elsewhere with him as he desired and importuned her. Mr. Nash testified that there was insanity in Nienaber's family and there is little doubt that his domestic troubles unsettled his mind. The determination to kill his wie was updoubtedly fixed. Mrs. Nienaber remains in about the same condition as when seen yesterday and is still lying at Charles Smith's house, to which she fled after the shooting. It will be a day or two before there is any marked change in her case.

"Olivette" at the Grand Last Night. Experience has demonstrated, as a fact peculiar to Springfield that "Olivette," though comprising more beautiful airs, and having a better plot than "The Mascotte," and being more popular in other cities, will not attract as large an audience here as the latter opera. The attendance at the Grand last evening was somewhat less than on the preceding night, ret the entertainment was more enjoyable and the singing much finer. Miss Helene Cooper is altogether a more pleasing Olite than Catherine Lewis. Her acting is arming and vivacious, with less dash and nigh kicking than distinguishes Miss Lewis and she impresses her audience with her bright, graceful simplicity and sweet singing rather than with stage gymnastics for the benefit of the bald-headed row. Miss Hosmer as the Countess sang in excellent voice and was roundly applauded. The other characters were well enacted and met with the demonstrative appreciation of the audience. A very large number of seats have been reserved for "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief" to night. Tomorrow evening "Pinafore" wil be presented, with its many pretty and popular features. "The Little Duke" will be the attraction for Friday evening instead of Sat-

Grand Army Day.

As briefly mentioned last evening, the semi annual or summer Encampment of the Department of Obio, G. A. R., has been definitely located in this city, August 6 and 7, and Department Commander Brown's General Order to that effect will be published on or about the 15th inst. The Ohio State Journal, under the title of "Another Defeat for Columbus and Victory for the City Over in the Country," publishes a letter from Genera Hurst to Commander Neil, of McCoy Post, notifying him that the committee on leastlen of the encampment has decided upon during-field. The Journal says of the uncampment and location: "It would bring 25,000 to 30,-000 visitors to the city, and be a great occasion. By the following letter, received by Major Neil yesterday, it will be seen that pringfield has again taken the cake. Per-age Columbus should now retire from all races and allow the city of threshing machines a clear field."

ROUSE AND PARSONS

EPRESBYTERIANS

Delightful the Doubt Without Most

Entertainment of the season will be that of Thursday and Friday evenings, May 14th and 15th, to be given by the ladies of the First Presbyterian Church in Black's Opera House. It is the leading "society topic" of conversation everywhere, and everybody is going. There will be good music, strawberries and ice cream, with other refreshments of the choicest kinds. And a special feature of the numerous attractions will be the tableaux, historical, humorous, and pathetic, with the diversified and picturesque costumes, ancient and modern, many of them even rivaling in richness of material and delicacy of finish, the elegant and handsome slippers and fine dress shoes for ladies and children to be found at will be no exception.

Under the able management of Miss Amanda Craig, Mr. and Mrs. August Almbs, the wife of Rev. H. W. Tate, and her guest, Miss Emma Buchanan, were surprised at the parsonage last evening by a large party of parishloners of Wiley M. E. church and others. the special occasion being Mrs. Tate's birthday anniversary. Mr. Tate was in the secret and took the ladies to church, hanging the house key where the visitors easily secured it. When Mrs. Tate and guests returned home there was the house filled with people, and two long tables loaded with a rich feast, so bountiful that much remained untouched after all were satisfied. It was the completest affair ever tendered the pastor and wife. The following named guests were Mrs. George Ellis, Mrs. Wesley Bradford, Mrs. Pricilla Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. The new Post is named in honor of two brothers named Boggs, both Logan county soldiers, one of whom starged to death in Belle Isle or Libby prison and the other died at home after the The latter had been elected sheriff, but died before his term of office began.

The ladies are busy arranging and decorating the interior of Black's Opera House for the National Festival tomorrow and Friday evening, by the congregation of the First Presbyterian church. The house is magically transformed into an immense bazar, with gorgeously decorated booths, statuary, etc. The parquette has been solidly floored over and makes a grand promenade. Numerous novelties will be introduced and good music provided for both evenings, making up one of the most attractive entertainments ever given bere.

Persian Women at Home.

The frou-frou of silk is heard. Three ladies enter the room. Their feet and legs are bare to the knee, for they have cast off their shoes at the door, but all the rest of them is shrouded in a large sheet of dark-blue silk, the outer veil of the Persian lady. Gracefully they sink down into heaps Gracefully they sink down into heaps in a semicircle opposite us. "Salaam, sahib! You are welcome. Tea, tea for the sahib!" I responded in the customary way and inquired after the health of my veiled hostesses. One only replies in a confident tone—she is evidently of middle age and self-possessed. The other two blue heaps shake with inward mirth, but are significant. "It cannot be it is too hol!" the lady continues, as she cast off her the lady continues, as she cast off her dark-blue envelope—an example immediately followed by her companions. Heart's Delight hastily folds up the three veils, and a plump, middle-aged lady, very comely, and her two innocent-looking daughters, handsome young women, fair as any English girl, with round, chubby faces and magnificent eyes, are disclosed to view in all the splendor of the Persian lady's indoor dress. The costume of all is the same, varying only in colors. all is the same, varying only in colors, and these are of the gayest. Short and voluminous skirts of silk, much bouffe, reaching to the knee; shirts (the Persian word, like the French chemise, is applied to the garment of both sexes) of transparent silk gauze; tiny zonave jackets of gayly-embroid-ered velvet, just covering the shoulders and the top of the back (of these the sleeves are unbuttoned from the elbow, hanging down and showing the gay linings of pale-colored but brilliant silk); the top of the head and the ears are hidden by gorgeous silk kerchiefs, embroidered in gold, and there is no more clothing to describe, unless the numerous bracelets of the bangle form, of gold and of glass, which jangle as the ladies move their arms, may be called clothes.

The ladies chat; the younger ones

The ladies chat; the younger ones only to each other in an undertone, for maiden modesty prevents their addressing the doctor; but they giggle and titter a good deal, and are duly reproved for it by the elder lady. Tea in delicate old china cups is served; we all smoke hubble-bubbles, and four of them are brought by Heart's Delight and three other black female slaves. Presently I hear a tittering behind me. Presently I hear a tittering behind me, turn, and instantly there is dead silence as a bright curtain of shot-silk quickly falls, but not before I have observed an amused bevy of gayly-dressed women and children. "Ex-then. "After all, you are right. Where there is a woman there is dis-cord," says my hostess. More tea, more pipes. Sweet-cakes, confectionery, and conserves are banded; iced sherbet, in Bohemian glass tumblers, gilt and of gaudy colors, is served. I gilt and of gaudy colors, is served. insinuate something to the effect that this is a professional visit; my hostess smiles. I repeat the remark, and then the lady, rising to bid farewell, re-plies: "We were dull; we were bored; you have desennuye us. Wallah!"-with a little laugh-"I have forgotten why we sent for you. Your footsteps, however, have been fortunate, for our hearts are no longer sad." So here was an end of my visit. We shook hands heartily, and the lady gave me a huge bouquet of narcissus as I left.—St. James Gazette.

A citizen of Pipesville, Ohio, writes to a New York paper of a discovery he made in regard to the distance the sun is from the earth. The gentleman is evidently sincere. He says: "I measure the same way we measure the height of a tree while standing, and heigh of a tree while standing, and a carpenter's square I find the distance to the sun is just 3,000 miles from the equator, or, in other works, 3,000 miles from the earth. I also claim the earth is stationary, and the north pole is the center, and the sun, moon, and stars travel around it. By my measure the sun is 1 0 miles across the face."

Edwin (who is fond of lecturing his tuture bride)—Well, good-by, Angy, I don't know how it is, but I always seem to leave you in tears! Angelina (tenderly, through her sobs)—I—I—I'd sooner you should leave me in tears, love, than never leave me at all!
